1. During April the control of all motor transport in Bulgaria was taken from the Ministry of Railroads and given to the Militia. The latter can now exercise complete control over the road transport of the country and prevent anyone who is not persona grata from owning a car or even using public motor transport.
2. The Bulgarian motor coach and bus services were formerly scheduled to run in conjunction with the railroad services and were under contractual obligation to operate a certain number of routes, irrespective of the number of passengers. These regulations have been superseded, and the Militia is now free to operate or suspend any particular road service at will.
3. The dam at Mezdra is situated 2 kilometers from the railroad station on the Iskr River. A hydro-electric power station with two turbines of a total capacity of 54,000 kilowatts is to be erected here; current is to be supplied to Mezdra and Vratza.
